Advance Call Hits Research For Military

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — An explosion apparently caused by a bomb killed one person and heavily damaged a mathematics building containing millions of dollars worth of equipment at the University of Wisconsin today. Police said a graduate student was killed and two researchers and a watchman were injured.

Nearby buildings also were damaged. Lt. Kenneth Buss said police received a telephone call at 3:40 a.m. from a person who said there was a bomb planted in the building.

2 MINUTES LATER

Buss said, "At 3:42 the building exploded. There was a flash fire."

Robert Fassnacht, 30, Madison, a graduate student, married and the father of three children, was killed.

The injured were identified at University Hospitals as David Schuster, 27, a graduate student from Johannesburg, South Africa, and Norbert Sutter, 57, a night watchman.

University officials said it was not unusual for researchers to be working during the night.

"We're open 24 hours a day," said Jay Davis, 28, Madison, who recently received his doctorate in nuclear physics.

"He was a very pleasant person," Davis said of Fassnacht. "He was a camper and hiker—very outdoorsy."

Schuster and Sutter were listed in satisfactory condition. Paul Quinn, 29, Madison, also a researcher, received minor lacerations but was not hospitalized.

Windows were blown out in buildings as far away as Capitol Square, 10 blocks away.

Scores were knocked out at University Hospitals, one block away, but no one there was reported hurt badly.

"We were very fortunate," a hospital spokesman said. "There was all kinds of glass breaking but no serious injuries. One patient, however, received a minor cut."

'Soapy', Swainson Join Levin

GRAND RAPIDS (AP)—Harking back 20 years to a brighter era, Michigan Democrats tapped their last two governors to join new leader Sander Levin in a bid to shatter the seven-year interregnum of Republicans George Romney and William Milliken.

Some 2,300 boisterous delegates, meeting in convention over the weekend, whooped their welcome Sunday at the return of former Govs. G. Mennen Williams and John B. Swainson as candidates for the State Supreme Court.

HE STILL THERE

Sporting the famous green-and-white polka-dotted bow tie, Williams was the "Soapy" of old as he flashed the same electric smile that carried him to successive terms from 1949 to 1960.

Swainson served one term as Williams' lieutenant and another as governor in his own right between 1959 and 1962.

The two join Livonia Mayor Edward H. McNamara, Levin's personally selected running mate, and Richard Austin, running for secretary of state after losing narrowly in a bid last year to become the first black mayor of Detroit.

U.S. Sen. Philip A. Hart, challenged for a third term by Romney's wife, Lenore, rounds out the top of the ticket along with Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley, renominated without opposition to seek a fourth term.

In other nominations, two women and six men were chosen to run for seats on education boards. They include:

—For the State Board of Education: Thomas Brennan, Dearborn incumbent, and Mrs. Annette Miller, who ran unsuccessfully for a nomination to the U.S. House in the recent primary.

—for University of Michigan regents: Paul Brown, son of former U.S. Sen. Prentiss Brown of Petoskey, and James Waters, a black Muskegon lawyer, whose wife, Nancy, is the party's corresponding secretary.

—for Michigan State University trustees: G. Donald Stevens, 12-year incumbent who is board chairman, and Mrs. Patricia Carrigan, an MSU graduate living in Ann Arbor.

—for Wayne State University governors: Max Pincus, president, Hughes, Hatcher, Suffrin, the Detroit men's haberdashery chain, and Leon Atchison, aide to U.S. Rep. John Conyers of Detroit.

Approval Sunday of the nominations of Austin, Williams and Swainson played out the major backroom power struggles of the convention.

In varying degrees, they represented substantial personal victories for Levin, the 38-year-old state senator and former party chairman from Berkeley who now emerges as unchallenged party leader.

Zollan Ferency, an earlier chairman and unsuccessful candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, did not attend the convention. He received a brief flurry of floor support when nominated for lieutenant governor, but the convention moved on promptly to endorse McNamara, Levin's surprise choice for the post after lengthy deliberation and soundings through various wings of the party.

Reemergence of Williams and Swainson in the party's forefront after years of obscurity clearly gave enthusiasm to the rank and file when both were ratified by substantial majorities.

GEORGE BEHREND
United GOP Chairman

Conservatives Seek Greater GOP Voice

See Moral Victory In Huber Vote

By PAUL DODSON
Staff Writer

NEW BUFFALO — Light rain was falling when State Senator Robert Huber began speaking but as he concluded his talk the sun came out from behind the gray clouds and shined brilliantly.

Huber said this could be a sign of the bright future conservatives have in Michigan politics.

That was the scene Saturday when the United Republicans of Michigan met with their State Chairman, George Behrends, at his fashionable home at Michigan Shores, south of New Buffalo. The gathering of the politically conservative faction took place on an outdoor patio.

A few of the 60 persons there staked their claims early upon the tables with umbrellas but most had to sit out in the warm drizzle.

Before the meeting there had been a lot of excited talk about forming a third political party to accommodate conservatives who feel they are not covered by the umbrellas of the regular Democratic or Republican parties. But at meetings' end, the conservatives decided against forming a third party -- at least for now.

WITHHOLD SUPPORT

United Republicans also decided they won't support Republican candidates William Milliken and Mrs. Lenore Romney in the November election "until their positions are made clear and acceptable."

Huber and his followers are saying that the Michigan GOP had better pay attention to the conservatives or face certain defeat at the polls without their support.

Both Milliken and Mrs. Romney face tough battles against powerful Democrats. Gov. Milliken is opposed by State Senator Sander Levin for the governorship while Mrs. Romney is facing the popular and well-entrenched incumbent U.S. Senator Philip Hart.

Conservative Huber came within a few percentage points of defeating Mrs. Romney for the Republican nomination to BERRIEN SPRINGS — Governor William G. Milliken told area newsmen here Saturday evening that he hoped the Republican party of Michigan would have a "broad based support" from all factions of the party in the upcoming fall elections.

Gov. Milliken who spoke briefly at a press conference at the Youth fairgrounds said the GOP's strength "lies in its diversity," having both conservatives and liberals. He predicted both factions would unite at the State convention.

Concerning his opponent in the fall election, Democrat Sander Levin, Gov. Milliken said he expected Levin to run a good campaign, but his would be "more successful."

Nationwide Strike Wednesday

Women Protesting Their Kitchen Role

By JOE NICHOLSON JR.
Associated Press Writer

Women plan to demand equality with men in rallies from coast to coast Wednesday, the day of a National Women's strike against menial jobs and kitchen work.

Leaders of the women's liberation movement, who called the strike to coincide with the 50th anniversary of women's suffrage, say strike activities will include seminars, marches and the beginning of a nationwide boycott of five products that the movement contends insult women in their advertisements.

The National Organization of Women—NOW—said it would identify the five products in New York Wednesday. NOW said the products treat women as "deodorized young meat."

The strike's goals are job equality, free day-care centers and free abortions.

NOW launched its strike week activities Sunday at a service in the Arlington Street Unitarian-Universalist Church in Boston. Betty Friedan, founder of the organization and author of "The Feminine Mystique," predicted millions of women would boycott their jobs and close down their kitchens Wednesday.

"Bring our babies to the office," she said, "and sit them on the bosses' lap." She urged women to spend Wednesday "analyzing the conditions which keep us from being what we might be."

In Adams, Mass., Sunday, 10,000 persons stood in a steady

Crackdown Will Benefit Welfare Recipients Most

Sparked by the Area Resources Council (ARIC) and State Senator Charles Zollar, State Social Services officials have agreed to try to stem Berrien county's soaring social welfare load.

In the long run, anything that can be done in this direction will most of all benefit the recipients of welfare themselves. For the truth is that some neighborhoods have become so packed with welfare families that environmental problems are virtually unmanageable. And particularly

'Advice' To Lawmen

By issuing a report on crowd control, the United States Justice Department tried to lay out some common sense rules which would prevent the unnecessary use of gunplay. In vacillating on several points, however, the department may have left the issue more confusing than before.

The suggestion that law officers should attempt to prevent demonstrations from "deteriorating" to the point that the use of firearms becomes necessary is good, but nothing is said about how this is to be accomplished. Are crowds to be broken up by police before they reach volatile proportions?

Perhaps the most dangerous situation facing an officer is sniper fire, yet the Department ignores it. Nor does it say what to do about arsonists or others caught in criminal acts under cover of demonstrations.

In short, the Justice finds it cannot recommend in advance how an officer should react to a given situation.

The best way to prevent demonstrations from degenerating into violence is for the police to be present in forces large enough to handle any eventuality, tolerate and protect the crowd's legitimate rights, but move with dispatch and the minimum force required to apprehend any lawbreakers.

This is what the vast majority of law officers have done in the face of some of the most provocative situations ever to face them in this nation.

ACLU And Drugs

The American Civil Liberties Union's flirtation with a laissez faire policy toward the use of drugs has now led it, inevitably, to the ultimate inanity, a pontification by its biennial conference that an individual has the right to use his own body as he wishes and that this right includes the use and possession of narcotics.

The ACLU concedes that "conduct resulting from the use or possession of drugs may invoke civil or criminal penalties," but sees nothing criminal in the mere possession or use of drugs.

The argument that one can do with his body as he pleases is a dubious one at best and certainly bears no relevance to the drug scene.

When addicts prowl the streets in search of a dishonest dollar to support their habit, when governmental and private agencies engage in agonizing searches for means of helping "hooked" youngsters, then the public not only has the right but the duty to legislate against those uses of the body personal that represents sores on the body politic.

Burning of the Executive Mansion sort of became a blessing in disguise. Repaired, it was painted snow white and became the architectural gem admired by the whole world—the White House.

BORN TODAY

His Eminence, Richard Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of Boston, has been called the "People's Cardinal." Of later years, his closeness to the families of President John Kennedy and Sen. Robert Kennedy have brought him to the attention of the nation.

He was born in Boston, the son of Patrick and Mary Dahill Cushing who came to Boston from Ireland. He was educated in public elementary schools, Boston College High School, and Boston College. Cardinal Cushing quit college after two years to enter St.

John's Seminary at Brighton, Mass.

His ordination as a priest took place on May 26, 1921. For some 20 years he served as director of the Boston Society for the Propagation of the Faith.

His work for the Roman Catholic missions was recognized in April, 1939, when he was made a Monsignor. Two months later he became titular bishop of Mela and auxiliary bishop of Boston, succeeding Francis Cardinal Spellman, who became archbishop of New York.

He was consecrated a bishop on June 29th. Upon the death of William Cardinal O'Connell in 1944, Bishop Cushing was selected as interim administrator of the archdiocese.

In that same year, he was appointed archbishop of Boston. He was then 48 years old, youngest archbishop in the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

On Nov. 17, 1958, Pope John XXIII elevated him to the Sacred College of Cardinals, making him the second cardinal to serve as archbishop of Boston. He received his red hat at a public consistory at Rome in December.

Others born today include Phil Baker and Llewellyn Thompson.

..And Speaking Of Your Health

What are some of the best home remedies for food poisoning or ptomaine?

Mr. S.P., Louisiana
Dear Mr. P.: Although ptomaine and food poisoning are often classed as one, there is a difference. Ptomaines are poisons that usually are toxic products of decay from some animal matter.

When eaten they produce the typical symptoms of food poisoning.

Food poisoning can be caused by spoiled shellfish, inedible mushrooms, or food spoiled by inadequate refrigeration. Usually the symptoms occur abruptly. Headache, nausea, diarrhea, and abdominal cramps may occur 10 to 20 hours after contaminated food has been eaten.

Allergies and intestinal virus infections, drug poisonings, and dietary or alcoholic indiscretion can produce the same symptoms.

Since the symptoms are so closely allied, treatment should be suggested by a doctor. The temptation to use cathartics and purges should be avoided because they increase the fluid loss and may complicate simple food poisoning.

Small sips of cold ginger ale or cola drinks are easily tolerated. Eat little or nothing at first and concentrate on replenishing the fluid loss.

When a particular food is suspected, a small sample can be very helpful to the doctor in finding the cause and recommending the proper treatment.

A wise axiom for home remedies of all kinds is to do less more slowly until your doctor makes specific recommendations.

Are the statistics about venereal disease true? I cannot believe that, with modern medical education, the recent reports are accurate. We have discussed this with our children and they, too, question it.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R., New Jersey
Dear Mr. and Mrs. R.: You had better believe it. The statistics are not only true, but I believe the numbers that are reported are far less than actually exist.

Many thousands of young people acquire active gonorrhea and syphilis and are afraid to bring their symptoms to the attention of a doctor. The major reason is that they do not want their parents to know about it. Consequently, these cases are not included in the statistics.

Let me repeat that you and every other parent must impress your children with the fact that these life-threatening diseases exist in major epidemic proportions.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH: The label "psychosomatic" disease is no substitute for a thorough examination.

Opening lead — queen of hearts.

This deal occurred in the France-U.S. match in 1967. The bidding was hotly contested, though only a part score was at stake, and the French North-South pair, Stetten and Tintner, would up at four diamonds doubled.

West (Roth, playing with Roth) led the queen and another heart. Roth won with the king and returned the ace and another trump in order to reduce dummy's ruffing power.

Declarer won with the king and was faced with the proposition of attempting to ruff two hearts and two spades with only three trumps. Recognizing this as an impossible task, declarer led a spade at trick five and finessed the jack. Unfortunately, the finesse lost and he went down one.

Actually, South could have made the contract by taking a slightly different view. He should have read from both the bidding and the play that West's distribution was 5-2-1-5 and after East had shown up with the A-K of hearts and ace of diamonds, that West was bound to have the ace of clubs.

Accordingly, declarer should have won the second diamond in dummy, ruffed a club, a heart, a club, a heart, and then ruffed another club to produce this position:

North
♠ A J	♦ 5	♥ K
West
♠ 10 9 7	♦ A	♥ A	♣ 10
South
♠ K 8 4 2	♦ —	♥ —	♣ —

A spade lead to the ace, followed by the lead of the diamond five, would force another spade discard from West, and the K-8 of spades would then win the last two tricks regardless of who had the queen.

Try And Stop Me

Laid low by an attack of flu just two months before he died, the famous author, Somerset Maugham, was disturbed in his Cape Ferrat home by a female admirer who phoned to ask, "May I send you a basket of fruit — or would you rather have flowers?" Replied the ailing old Maugham, "It's too late, I fear, for fruit, my dear — and too early for flowers."

Fable: A very rich old man, realizing that his days were numbered, summoned his three sons to his bedside and told them, "I'm going to leave the greater part of my fortune to the son who can prove he's most qualified to preserve and even increase it. There are three identical rooms on the first floor of this house. I want each of you to fill every nook and cranny of one room. Use any commodity that you wish, but task must be completed by 1:00 p.m. today."

The first son chose to fill a room with sand. The second used straw. Neither, unfortunately, was able to meet the 1:00 p.m. deadline.

Meanwhile, Son Number Three appeared to be doing nothing. At five minutes to one, he wheeled his ailing father into his room, raised the shades and let the glorious sun fill every corner with light and brightness. The father shaded his eyes and beamed, "My boy, you are the one who has shown yourself most worthy of inheriting the bulk of my fortune."

The sheriff's department reported that Arnt, 23, could return to duty as soon as he feels like, possibly in a day or so.

Arnt received stomach injuries and dislocated a disc in his back while wrestling with a man who reportedly jumped from a patrol car at Shawnee road and Cleveland avenue.

Fire Run Will Cost Man $280

Benton township Fire Lt. Bruce Garrett said a Hagar township resident will be billed $280 as the cost of an unnecessary fire run Sunday.

Garrett said the Benton department responded to an alarm of a large brush fire on property owned by Warren Damon, Riverside. The fire was reported by another resident. Firemen found the blaze under control, but Damon had neglected to get a burning permit and inform the fire department, Garrett said.

The Benton department has a contract to answer alarms in Hagar township which then bills the resident, Garrett said. Cost is $225 for a firetruck and $5 per hour for each volunteer fireman. Eleven volunteers answered the alarm at Damon's property.
